Fanzini

Sam pojam fanzin datira iz 30-tih godina prošlog vijeka u Americi gdje su štovatelji naučne fantastike pokretali male sopstvene publikacije gdje su objavljivali kratke priče nepoznatih ili poznatih autora ovog književnog žanra. Naziv potiče od "fan" – obožavatelj ili fanatik (bilo to fudbal, science fiction ili punk muzika) i "zine"- skraćeno od magazine, časopis. To su većinom entuzijasti koji nisu plaćeni za svoj rad niti su profesionalni novinari ni pisci.

Nakon 60-tih, rata u Vijetnamu i fanzina antiratnih sa poezijom u fokusu, sredinom i krajem 70-tih u Engleskoj počinje bum samizdat ("Do It Yourself") fanzina koji su vezani uz nastanak punk pokreta. Najpoznatiji je bio Sniffin Glue autora Mark Perry-a (pjevač benda Alternative TV), zatim 48 Thrills, Ripped & Torn, Alternative Ulster i drugi. U New Yorku počinje izlaziti Punk, u Kaliforniji Slash, Search and Destroy, itd.

Pojavom hardcorea sve se multiplicira kako u Americi (Flipside, Maximum RocknRoll, Suburban Voice, Touch & Go, itd.) tako i u Evropi (Italija — Linea Diritta i TVOR; Njemačka – Zap, OX zine, Plastic Bomb i Trust; Velika Britanija – Problem Child, Raising Hell i Artcore; Poljska – QQRYQ). Potom i svaki novi pokret unutar undergrounda, kao što su Oi, straight edge, emo ili riot grrrl, ima svoju gomilu izdanja.

Fanzini u bivšoj Jugoslaviji

Sa dolaskom panka i new wavea na prostor bivše Jugoslavije, počinju se objavljivati kopije prvih fanzina u malom broju primjeraka, bez distribucije i ikakvih reklama, skoro ilegalno.

1980. u Beogradu Vladimir Arsenijević i Branko Rosić Rosa imaju bend Urbana Gerila po čemu su nazvali i svoj fanzin koji je izašao u čak 5 brojeva. U tom prvom naletu u ostalim gradovima su bili Punk Problemi (Ljubljana), Zagrebački Trubač (Zagreb), Kvazimodo, Kreten (Pančevo), Kult (Rijeka), Besplatna Diploma (Sarajevo), Ego (Sarajevo) i čak 5 fanzina iz malog mjesta koje se zove Ruma u Srbiji.

1983. naletom hardcore muzike pojavljuju se dva jako bitna i dugovječna: Vrnitev Odpisanih (David Kržišnik i Irena Povše iz Ljubljane) i Dvadeset 4 Časa (Đorđe Obradović Gvido iz Beograda). 1985. novi val fanzina: Izazov (Raša u Istri), Zašto Baš Mi? (Subotica), Punk Proces (Novi Sad), Corpus Delicti (Karlovac), Progressive Idiots (Zagreb), Trič Trač (Pula), Udar Svijetu (Mostar), Sluh (Mostar), Ćup (Tuzla) i Teror (Zenica). U drugoj polovini 1980. došlo je do povećanog interesa za fanzine. Samo do 1991. preko 200 različitih fanzina je osmišljeno i objavljeno u bivšoj Jugoslaviji.

Fanzini su se prodavali na koncertima, došli su i do nekih knjižara, prodavnica ploča, kaseta i diskova. Razmjenjivalo se sa domaćim i stranim distributerima i drugim zinemakerima. U kovertama su čitaoci slali novce pa su tako kupovali. Prosječan zin se štampao u tiražama od 30 do 100 primjeraka. Grafička rješenja od očajnih i teško čitljivih do sjajnih, broj stranica od nekoliko pa do debelih 70-tak stranica. Struktura muzičkih fanzina je manje više identična: uvodna riječ, pisma čitalaca, scene reports iz cijelog svijeta, infosi i intervjui sa bendovima, izvještaji sa koncerata i recenzije kaseta, ploča, drugih fanzina i, ponekad, kolumne o raznim temama bilo političkim, gender ili nasilju na svirkama. Kako se bližio rat, došlo je do raslojavanja i među zinemakerima po pitanju Kosova, agresivnog ponašanja dijela skinheadsa, navijačko fudbalsko huliganskog upliva na pank i hardcore scenu i na koncu kratkotrajnog rata u Sloveniji i otcijepljenja te republike iz SFRJ.

Fanzini u Sarajevu

U Sarajevu, nakon gore pomenutih Besplatne Diplome i Ega, nastalo je malo zatišje dok nije stasala nova ekipa fanzinaša. Od 1986. – 1988. kad se većina budućih autora vraća iz vojske, objavljeni su sljedeći: EPITAPH (Goran Perišić Pesha, Alen Dragulj, Saša Milutinović i Dragomir Križić Križa), FACCIA (Mirsad Picek Dedić, Dragomir Križić Križa i Amir Hodžić Hole), Crash (Sead Kreševljaković i Arsen Novalija), Viva La Dark i Energy Shower (Alen Dragulj i Igor Bračulj Čonta).

Od 1989. pa do 1991. završnu fazu su obilježili: Snow Fall, Neue Urform Product (Picek Dedić i Dragomir Križić Križa), Liberation (Mirsad Dedić, Amir Hodžić i Dragomir Križić Križa), Destination i Vibro (Mirsad Dedić, Amir Hodžić i Žanko Andrić). VIBRO je potpomoglo i Ministarstvo kulture Grada Sarajeva sa štampanjem oko 1000 besplatnih primjeraka.

Fanzines

The expression "fanzine" dates back to the 1930s in the United States, where fans of science fiction used to publish short stories of known or unknown authors in this genre. The name comes from "fan" (e.g. football, science fiction or punk music) and "zine", which is short for magazine. Since the outset, fanzine contributors have been enthusiasts and they are generally not paid for their work nor are they professional journalists or writers.

After the 1960s, and the Vietnam war with its anti-war fanzines with a strong focus on poetry, in mid-1970s England there was an explosion of 'Do-It-Yourself' fanzines linked to the emergence of the punk movement. The most famous was Sniffin Glue by Mark Perry (singer of the band Alternative TV), and also 48 Thrills, Ripped & Torn, Alternative Ulster and others. Writers in New York started publishing Punk, and in California writers started publishing Slash, Search and Destroy and others.

With the emergence of hardcore, everything began to multiply, both in the Unites States (Flipside, Maximum RocknRoll, Suburban Voice, Touch & Go, etc.) and in Europe (Italy – Linea Diritta and TVOR; Germany – Zap, OX zine, Plastic Bomb and Trust; UK – Problem Child, Raising Hell and Artcore; and Poland – QQRYQ). In addition, there was each new movement within the underground, such as Oi, straight edge, emo or riot grrrl, which each had multiple publications.

Fanzines in Yugoslavia

With the arrival of punk and new wave in the former Yugoslavia, copies of the first fanzines began to be published in small quantities, without distribution and advertisements, and almost illegally.

In Belgrade in 1980, Vladimir Arsenijević and Branko Rosić Rosa had a band called Urbana Gerila, and they named their fanzine after that band, which came out in five editions. In that first wave, publications in other cities included Punk Problemi (Ljubljana), Zagrebački Trubač (Zagreb), Kvazimodo, Kreten (Pančevo), Kult (Rijeka), Besplatna Diploma (Sarajevo), Ego (Sarajevo) and as many as five fanzines from the small town of Ruma in Serbia.

In 1983 with the surge of hardcore music, two very significant and long-lasting fanzines emerged: Vrnitev Odpisanih (David Kržišnik and Irena Povše from Ljubljana) and Dvadeset 4 Časa (Đorđe Obradović Gvido from Belgrade). In 1985, a new wave of fanzines followed with Izazov (Raša in Istria), Zašto Baš Mi? (Subotica), Punk Proces (Novi Sad), Corpus Delicti (Karlovac), Progressive Idiots (Zagreb), Trič Trač (Pula), Udar Svijetu (Mostar), Sluh (Mostar), Ćup (Tuzla) and Teror (Zenica). There was increased interest in fanzines in the second half of the 1980s. By 1991, more than 200 different fanzines had been created and released in Yugoslavia alone.

Fanzines were sold at concerts, and some reached book stores and shops selling records, tapes and discs. They were exchanged among domestic and foreign distributors and other zine-makers. Readers used to send money in envelopes to buy them. An average zine would be printed in 30 to 100 copies. Their graphics quality varied from terrible and almost illegible to excellent, with the number of pages ranging from several to as many as 70. The structure of music fanzines was more or less identical: introduction, letters from readers, music scene reports from all over the world, information about and interviews with bands, concert reports, reviews of tapes, records and other fanzines, and sometimes columns covering various topics including politics, gender, or violence at concerts. As war was nearing, disagreements arose amongst zine-makers about Kosovo, the aggressive behavior of some skinheads, football fans' influence on the punk and hardcore scene and the brief war in Slovenia and its separation from Yugoslavia.

Fanzines in Sarajevo

In Sarajevo, after the above mentioned Besplatna Diploma and Ego, there was a brief standstill before a new team of zine-makers matured. From 1986 to 1988 when most of the future zine authors were returning from their mandatory military service, the following were published: EPITAPH (Goran Perišic Pesha, Alen Dragulj, Saša Milutinović and Dragomir Križić Križa), FACCIA (Mirsad Picek Dedić, Dragomir Križić Križa and Amir Hodžić Hole), Crash (Sead Kreševljaković and Arsen Novalija), Viva La Dark and Energy Shower (Alen Dragulj and Igor Bračulj Čonta).

From 1989 through 1991, the final phase included Snow Fall, Neue Urform Product (Picek Dedić and Dragomir Križić Križa), Liberation (Mirsad Dedić, Amir Hodžić and Dragomir Križić Križa), Destination and VIBRO (Mirsad Dedić, Amir Hodžić and Žanko Andrić). VIBRO was supported by the Ministry of Culture of the City of Sarajevo, which printed around 1000 copies free of charge.
