Indexi

Indexi – Nesumnjivo najznačajniji sarajevski sastav iz šezdesetih godina 20.vijeka jeste grupa Indexi. Dvojica mladića iz Sarajeva, Ismet Nuno Arnautalić i Šefko Akšamija spremali su se u ljeto 1962.godine da krenu na fakultet i kako su već pomalo svirali u lokalnim sastavima odlučili su da grupi koju su namjeravali formirati daju ime Indexi. Formirali su grupu u kojoj su se, pored Arnautalića koji je svirao gitaru i Akšamije koji je svirao bas gitaru, našli još gitarista Slobodan Bobo Misaljević, klavijaturista Đorđe Uzelac i bubnjar Nedo Hadžihasanović. Već naredne 1963.godine za bubnjeve će u Indexima sjesti Đorđe Kisić.

Prvi put su od šire javnosti zapaženi kada su 1964.godine na gitarijadi u Beogradu osvojili drugo mjesto i priliku da snime ploču. Rezultat je bio singl sa četiri pjesme. Grupu napuštaju Akšamija, Misaljević i Uzelac, a kao zamjena za gitaristu i basistu iz grupe Lutalice dolaze Slobodan A. Kovačević i Fadil Redžić. Nešto prije njih dvojice iz grupe Pauci stiže jedva punoljetni pjevač Davorin Popović i Indexi u pravom smislu te riječi postaju vokalno instrumentalni sastav.

Do 1967.godine ovaj sastav se instrumentalistički izgrađuje neprekidnim svirkama tokom kojih stiču status najboljeg "električarskog" sastava u Sarajevu. Od 1967.godine Indexi u postavi ponovo imaju klavijature, a svira ih student sarajevske muzičke akademije Kornelije Kovač. U narednih nekoliko godina slijedi još par festivalskih nastupa, Na mjesto Kornelija Kovača u Indexe je 1968.godine došao Đorđe Novković.

Krajem šezdesetih počinju raditi na sve progresivnijem zvuku i tada nastaju pjesme kao što su "Plima" i "Negdje na kraju u zatišju". U decembru 1969.godine okončao se prvi dio rada ove grupe kada je u vojsku otišao Ismet Nuno Arnautalić.

Sedamdesete su bile najznačajnije i najplodnije godine u karijeri Indexa. Početkom te decenije u grupu je došao Ranko Rihtman . Već 1970.godine imali su veliki uspjeh sa pjesmom "Da sam ja netko". Pjesma je objavljena i na singlu sa čije se druge strane našao jedan od njihovih najvećih uspijeha, pjesma "Svijet u kojem živim". Ni Rihtman se u grupi nije dugo zadržao pa ga je, nakratko doduše, zamijenio Vlado Pravdić. A kada je Pravdić otišao kod Bregovića u grupu Jutro u Indexe na poziciju klavijaturiste dolazi Splićanin Enco Lesić. On će na tekst Kemala Montena napisati jedan od njihovih najvećih hitova, pjesmu "Sve ove godine". Ubrzo po objavljivanju ove pjesme Lesić je otišao u Zagreb i tamo osnovao grupu Spectar, a u Indexe se vratio Vlado Pravdić. On je sa njima ostao sve do 1973.godine. U međuvremenu objavljuju neke od svojih najvećih hitova kao što su "Sanjam", "Balada" i "Plima". Sve tri pjesme tokom 1972.godine, a te godine su obilježili deset godina postojanja velikim koncertom u Skenderiji.

Početkom 1973.godine nakratko su se udružili sa grupom Pro Arte, ali su i dalje nastupali i samostalno. Tako su i pobijedili na festivalu "Vaš šlager sezone 1973" sa pjesmom Aleksandra Koraća "Predaj se srce". Umjesto Šaranovića bubnjeve je krajem 1974.godine preuzeo Milić Vukašinović, a klavijature Miroslav Maraus. Već naredne godine Maraus odlazi, a u grupu se opet vraća Enco Lesić. On je sa njima odsvirao turneju da bi od 1976.godine u Indexe kao novi klavijaturista došao Nenad Jurin koji je ranije svirao sa grupom COD. Tokom te godine Milić Vukašinović je otišao u Bijelo dugme, a iz Ambasadora je u Indexe došao bubnjar Perica Stojanović. A povremeno je svirao ponovo i Đorđe Kisić.

Prije svoje matične grupe album je objavio Davorin Popović i to 1976.godine pod nazivom Svaka je ljubav ista (osim one prave). Prvi "pravi" album Indexa pojavio se 1978.godine pod nazivom Modra rijeka i bilo je to epohalno ostvarenje. Pjesme su članovi grupe radili na tekstove pjesnika Maka Dizdara, grafičku opremu i dizajn ploče uradio je najpoznatiji bosanski slikar Mersad Berber.

Osamdesete godine su označile nešto diskretniji rad same grupe dok su se članovi posvetili drugim projektima. Davorin Popović je 1984.godine objavio drugi solo album S tobom dijelim sve. Fadil Redžić je sarađivao sa Davorinom na solo albumu, a producirao ga je Neno Jurin. Slobodan Bodo Kovačević je bio stalno uposlen u Revijskom orkestru Radio televizije Sarajevo, ali je nalazio vremena da gostuje brojnim kolegama na njihovim projektima.

Na samom kraju osamdesetih, Davorin Popović je otpjevao pjesmu "Žute dunje" za potrebe filma Kuduz koji je režirao Ademir Kenović, a za koji je muziku radio Goran Bregović. Tokom osamdesetih na mjesto klavijaturiste dolazi Sinan Alimanović. Ratne godine su dočekali u Sarajevu i snimili patriotsku pjesmu "Ulica prkosa". Davorin je sa Fadilom Redžićem i Đorđem Kisićem rat proveo u Sarajevu. Ranko Rihtman je otišao u Izrael, a Slobodan Bodo Kovačević u Prag. Davorin je tokom ratnih godina sarađivao sa mladim autorima poput braće Mulahalilović, Zlatka Arslanagića i Zlatana Fazlića Fazle. Fazla mu je napisao pjesmu "XXI vijek" sa kojom je Davorin Popović nastupio na Eurosongu 1995. Kada se u Sarajevo vratio Bodo Kovačević i Indexi su obnovili rad, ali ovaj put bez Fadila Redžića koji je odselio u Sjedinjene Američke Države. Na njegovo mjesto je došao Davor Černigoj, a bubnjar je postao Peco Petej. U toj postavi, uz Sinana Alimanovića, snimili su drugi studijski album Kameni cvjetovi. Stalni članovi grupe postali su i Željka Katavić Pilj i Alen Mustafić kao prateći vokali. Uz album su odradili i uspješnu promotivnu turneju i najavili nove projekte. Sve planove je rpekinula prerana smrt Davorina Popovića u junu 2001.godine. Tri godine kasnije preminuo je i Slobodan Kovačević. A onda zaredom 2005.godine Đorđe Kisić, a 2006.godine Nedo Hadžihasanović. Među živima više nije ni jedan od osnivača Šefko Akšamija.

O Indexima je knjigu pod nazivom U inat godinama napisao Josip Dujmović. Jedan od osnivača Ismet Nuno Arnautalić, takođe je napisao svoju knjigu sjećanja na Indexe. Zoran Kubura i Bojan Hadžiabdić su 2021. snimili dokumentarni film Indexi.

Indexi was undoubtedly the most important Sarajevo band from the 1960s. Two young men from Sarajevo, Ismet Nuno Arnautalić and Šefko Akšamija who already played a bit in local bands, decided to form a band while preparing to attend university in 1962, and they picked the name Indexi. In addition to Arnautalić who played guitar and Akšamija who played bass guitar, Slobodan Bobo Misaljević played guitar, keyboards were played by Đorđe Uzelac and Nedo Hadžihasanović was on the drums. In 1963, Đorđe Kisić started playing drums in Indexi.

The first time they were noticed by the general public was in 1964 when they won second place at a guitar festival in Belgrade and won the opportunity to record an album. The result was an album with four songs. Akšamija, Misaljević and Uzelac left the band, and Slobodan A. Kovačević and Fadil Redžić from the band Lutalice came to replace the guitar and bass player. The very young singer Davorin Popović from the band Pauci joined a little before the two of them, and Indexi in the true sense of the word become a vocal-instrumental band.

Until 1967, the band built its skill and reputation by continuous concerts, during which they acquired the status of the best "electric" band in Sarajevo. As of 1969, Indexi again had keyboards in their line-up played by Kornelije Kovač, a student in the Sarajevo Music Academy. In the next few years, there would be a few more festival performances. In 1968, Đorđe Novković replaced Kornelije Kovač.

At the end of the 1960s, they started working on an increasingly progressive sound, and that's when songs like "Plima" ("The Tide") and "Negdje na kraju u zatišju" ("Somewhere at the end in a calm") were created. When Ismet Nuno Arnautalić went for his army service in December 1969, the first period of the band's work ended.

The seventies were the most significant and fruitful years in Indexi's career. At the beginning of that decade, Ranko Rihtman joined the group. In 1970, the song "Da sam ja netko" ("If I were someone") was a success. The song was also released on a single, on the other side of which was one of their biggest hits, the song titled "Svijet u kojem živim" ("The World I Live In"). Rihtman didn't stay in the group for long either, so Vlado Pravdić replaced him, admittedly for a short time. When Pravdić left for the band Jutro (Morning) formed by Bregović, Enco Lesić from Split came to Indexi as keyboard player. He would write one of their greatest songs, "Sve ove godine" ("All These Years") based on lyrics by Kemal Monteno. Shortly after the publication of this song, Lesić went to Zagreb and founded the band Spektar ("The Spectre"), and Vlado Pravdić returned to Indexi. Vlado stayed with Indexi until 1973. In 1972 they released some of their biggest hits such as "Sanjam" ("I am Dreaming"), "Balada" ("Ballad") and "Plima". Additionally, in 1972 they marked ten years as a band with a big concert in Skenderija, in Sarajevo.

At the beginning of 1973, they briefly teamed up with the band Pro Arte, but continued to perform independently. They went on to win the festival "Vaš šlager sezone 1973" (Your hit of the season 1973) with the song "Predaj se srce" ("Give up my Heart") by Aleksandar Korač. Milić Vukašinović took over the drums from Šaranović at the end of 1974, while Miroslav Maraus took over on keyboards. Already the following year, Maraus left, and Enco Lesić returned to the band. He toured with them, and from 1976 Nenad Jurin, previously with the band COD joined Indexi as the new keyboard player. During that same year, Milić Vukašinović left for Bijelo dugme, and drummer Perica Stojanović left Ambasadori for Indexi. Occasionally Đorđe Kisić would play with Indexi again.

Davorin Popović released a solo album in 1976, before his band, titled Svaka je ljubav ista (osim one prave) (Every Love is the Same (Except True Love)). The first "real" album of Indexi appeared in 1978, Modra Rijeka (Blue River), and it was an epoch-making achievement. The songs were written by the group members based on the poems by Mak Dizdar, and the graphic design for the record was created by the famous Bosnian painter Mersad Berber.

The 1980s marked a more discreet era of the group, while its members devoted time to their individual projects. In 1984, Davorin Popović released his second solo album S tobom dijelim sve (I share everything with you). Fadil Redžić collaborated with Davorin on a solo album produced by Neno Jurin. Slobodan Bodo Kovačević was permanently employed in the Radio Television Orchestra Sarajevo, but he found time to be a guest with many of his colleagues on their independent projects.

At the very end of the 1980s, Davorin Popović sang the song "Žute Dunje" ("Yellow Quinces") for the movie Kuduz, directed by Ademir Kenović and featuring music composed by Goran Bregović. During the eighties, Sinan Alimanović took over as keyboard player. The members spent the war years in Sarajevo and recorded the patriotic song "Ulica prkosa" ("The Street of Defiance"). Davorin spent the war in Sarajevo with Fadil Redžić and Đorđe Kisić. Ranko Rihtman went to Israel, and Slobodan Bodo Kovačević went to Prague. During the war years, Davorin collaborated with young authors such as the brothers Mulahalilović, Zlatko Arslanagić and Zlatan Fazlić Fazla. Fazla wrote the song "XXI. Vijek" ("The 21st Century"), which Davorin Popović performed at the 1995 Eurovision Song Contest. When Bodo Kovačević returned to Sarajevo, Indexi resumed work, but this time without Fadil Redžić, who had moved to the United States. Davor Černigoj replaced Redžić in the band, and Peco Petej became the drummer. This line-up, together with Sinan Alimanović, recorded their second studio album Kameni cvjetovi (The Stone Flowers). Željka Katavić Pilj and Alen Mustafić, on back-up vocals, became permanent members of the band. Along with the new album, they had a successful promotional tour and announced new projects. All plans were disrupted by the untimely death of Davorin Popović in June 2001. Slobodan Kovačević also died three years later, followed by Đorđe Kisić in 2005, and Nedo Hadžihasanović in 2006. One of the founders, Šefko Akšami, has also passed away.

Josip Dujmović wrote a book on Indexi titled U inat godinama. One of the founders, Ismet Nuno Arnautalić, also wrote a book on Indexi. In 2021, Zoran Kubura and Bojan Hadžiabdić filmed the documentary film, Indexi.
