Čičci, Kodeksi...

Sarajevska pop rock scena počinje ozbiljnije da se razvija tokom šezdesetih godina prošloga vijeka. Iako je i tokom pedesetih godina bilo nekih sporadičnih pokušaja, uglavnom šlagerskih pjevača kao što su Sabahudin Kurt, Vedo Hamšić i Miralem Kruškić tek u šezdesetim imamo u pravom smislu te riječi rock izvođače. Javljaju se sastavi poput Lutalica, Sanjalica ili Pauka, ali najznačajniji trag iza sebe ostavljaju tri grupe koje će biti izuzteno važne za sarajevsku muzičku scenu. To su Čičci, Kodeksi i, naravno, Indexi.

Čičci

Čičci (VIS Čičak) – je grupa koja se pojavila u Sarajevu u prvoj polovini šezdesetih godina i poznatija je po onome što su njeni članovi napravili nakon raspada grupe, a manje po onome što je sama grupa ostavila iza sebe u diskografskom smislu. Čičci su bili poznati po dvije stvari. Po savršeno usklađenom višeglasnom pjevanju i po maratonskim koncertima. Za novu 1970.godinu u Domu mladih u Sarajevu svirali su neprekidno 26 sati. Nažalost, iza sebe nisu ostavili pomena vrijednu diskografiju. Njihove pjesme se mogu naći na nekim kompilacijama više bendova, pa su tako nastupili na festivalu "Vaš šlager sezone 1969" sa pjesmom "Ti si taj" i ona se našla na festivalskoj ploči. Autor muzike bio je Esad Arnautalić, a teksta Ranko Rihtman. Iste godine se na jednoj "Diskosovoj" kompilaciji našla i pjesma "Hipi Tom". Nesumnjivi lider sastava bio je gitarista Mahmut Paša Ferović (ranije svirao grupi Pauci sa Davorinom Popovićem) i njegovim odlaskom u vojsku grupa je zapravo i prestala postojati. Uz njega je u sastavu bio još jedan gitarista i to Dragan Gagi Danilović. Danilović je po raspadu grupe Čičci otišao u Dubrovnik i tamo pjevao sa grupom Dubrovački poklisari. Dragan Gagi Danilović je, po povratku u Sarajevo, nastavio da se bavi muzikom. Svirao je u sastavu "Dobro uštimani starci", a 2013.godine snimio je i solo album Želja. Ritam sekciju činili su bubnjar Milić Vukašinović (ranije svirao u grupi Plavi dijamanti zajedno sa Edom Bogeljićem koji će kasnije osnovati Kodekse) i bas gitarista Zoran Redžić. Peti član grupe Čičci bio je Ranko Rihtman. Odrastao u porodici uglednih stvaralaca klasične muzike on je iznenađujuće krenuo u vode rock'n'rolla. Svirao je klavijature i nakon grupe Čičci u nekoliko navrata je bio član Indexa.

Kodeksi

Kodeksi – su sastav koji je formirao gitarista Eduard Edo Bogeljić (punim imenom Eduard Mihael Bogeljić) sredinom šezdesetih godina XX vijeka. Uz njega je u grupi bio bas gitarista Dušan Čorlija koji je tu stigao iz grupe Lutalice koja je prestala sa radom nakon što ih je napustio gitarista Slobodan A. Kovačević i prešao u Indexe. Bubnjar Kodeksa u prvoj postavi bio je Vojo Šimsić, a onda je u grupu došao Luciano Paganotto. Na počecima Kodeksa sa njima je svirao i Miroslav Maraus. Kroz grupu su u raznim postavama prošli još i Dane Brkić, Seno Sijerčići Derviš Klokić Dedan. Ritam gitaru je svirao i pjevao Željko Bebek koga je Bogeljić pozvao da im se pridruži ubrzo nakon osnivanja, a članica grupe je postala i izuzetno mlada Ismeta Dervoz. Nakon što je Čorlija napustio grupu dali su se u potragu za novim bas gitaristom i neko se sjetio da mladi sastav Beštije ima zanimljivog bas gitaristu. Bebek je dobio zadatak da ga posluša kako svira i ako smatra da bi bio dovoljno dobar da ga nagovori da pređe. Mladi bas gitarista se zvao Goran Bregović.

Kodeksi su bili poznati kao cover band i nisu ni pokušavali da nešto ozbiljnije autorski naprave. Kao pravi zabavljački bend pozvani su da sviraju u hotelu "Splendid" u Dubrovniku tokom ljeta 1969.godine. Međutim, Ismeta Dervoz bila je premlada za tu avanturu i napustila je bend i privremeno i muziku da bi se posvetila studiju. Pjevanju će se vratiti 1972.godine kao vokalna solistica u grupi Ambasadori. Njenim odlaskom iz benda Bebek dobija sve vokalne dionice. Kodeksi nisu ostali nezapaženi. Jedan talijanski impresario pozvao ih je u Italiju da bi tamo radili ono što su i u Dubrovniku. Međutim, po dolasku u Italiju oni su ubrzo pokazali da bi željeli svirati nešto drugo, muziku koja baš i nije bila bliska publici pred kojom bi se našli. Dolazi do razdora u grupi, Bregović sve više preuzima ulogu lidera i kada se nezadovoljni Edo Bogeljić vrati u Sarajevo ta Bregovićeva čelna pozicija postaje i formalno potvrđena, a on po prvi put u životu u jednom bendu postaje vodeći gitarista. Za basistu je privremeno angažovan jedan Talijan, ali ubrzo je i on napustio grupu, a Bebek je iz Sarajeva pozvao svog prijatelja Zorana Redžića koji je svirao u grupi Čičak. Kako je i Paganotto napustio „Kodekse" Redžić sa sobom dovodi i svog kolegu iz Čička Milića Vukašinovića da svira bubnjeve. U jesen 1970.godine, nezadovoljan novim statusom u grupi i Bebek ih napušta i vraća se u Sarajevo.

Po povratku u Sarajevo Bebek se iznova udružuje sa Bogeljićem, a pridružuju im se bas gitarista Dražen Tuce koji je svirao sa grupom Pro arte i bubnjar Ljubo Pavlović koji je došao iz grupe Romeo i Julija. Tako je bend poznat kao Novi kodeksi dobio svoju formu krajem 1970.godine.

Šezdesete

Ostalo šezdesete na bh sceni – Pored grupa Indexi, Čičci i Kodeksi sa sarajevske i bosanskohercegovačke muzike scene šezdesetih godina vrijedi pomenuti imena kao što su Sabahudin Kurt, Miralem Kruškić, Alaga Gagić, Vedo Hamšić, Hamdija Čustović, Dženan Salković, Sokrat Kajević, Boško Orebović, Sabina Varešanović, Terusi, Vokinsi i drugi. Sabahudin Kurt će ostati zapamćen kao prvi muzičar iz Bosne i Hercegovine koji je predstavljao Jugoslaviju na Eurosongu. Hamdija Čustović, poznat i kao "Tigar sa Miljacke" bio je prvi muzičar koji je snimio Bregovićevu "Hop Cup", a imao je i veliki hit sa pjesmom "Slao sam joj cvijeće". Alaga Gagić iz Dervente ostavio je mnoštvo pjesama, a najpoznatija je "Solenzara". Vedo Hamšić je bio vlasnik prvog velikog pop hita o sarajevu, pjesme "Četiri mladića idu s Trebevića'. Mostarac Dženan Salković je povremeno pisao i snimao pjesme, ali to malo što je ostavio iza sebe izuzetno je vrijedno. Malo je poznato da je on autor pjesme "Prođe ovaj dan" koju je proslavila zagrebačka grupa Drugi način. Terusi su grupa iz Tuzle poznata po brojnim sjajnim muzičarima koji su prošli kroz nju, a najpoznatiji je sigurno Miodrag Bata Kostić koji je kasnije svirao sa YU grupom. U Vokinsima su svirali, između ostalih Vlado Pravdić i Vladimir Savčić Čobi. Čobi koji će slavu steći kao pjevač grupe Pro arte u Vokinsima je svirao bubnjeve.

Tokom šezdesetih godina u Bosni i Hercegovini nije djelovala niti jedna relevantna disko kuća. Od 1967.godine pokrenut je festival "Vaš šlager sezone". Na prvom izdanju tog festivala pobijedio je Kemal Monteno sa pjesmom "Lidija". Malo prije ovog festivala održana je u martu 1967.godine Prva gitarijada sarajevskih bendova. Pobijedili su Index" ispred grupa Čičak i Kodeksi.

ROCK EX YU CENTAR SARAJEVO

Sarajevo's pop rock scene began to develop seriously during the 1960s, though there were some sporadic attempts in the 1950s by mostly pop singers such as Sabahudin Kurt, Vedo Hamšić and Miralem Kruškić. The rock performers in the true sense of the word emerged in the 1960s. Bands such as Lutalica (The Wanderer), Sanjalica (The Dreamer) or Pauci (The Spiders) appeared, but the most significant traces were left by the three bands that would become extremely important for Sarajevo's music scene. These were Čičci (The Thistles), Kodeksi (The Codices) and, of course, Indexi (The Indexes).

Čičci (VIS Čičak) band appeared in Sarajevo in the first half of the 1960s, and was better known for what its members did after the breakup of the band than for their discography. Čičci were known for two things: their perfectly coordinated polyphonic singing and their marathon concerts. For the 1970 New Year they played continuously for 26 hours at the Youth Centre in Sarajevo. Unfortunately, they did not leave behind a discography worth mentioning. Their songs could be found on other bands' compilations. They performed at the festival "Vaš šlager sezone 1969" (Your biggest hit of the season 1969) with the song "Ti si taj" (You are the one) and it was included in the festival record. The music for the song was composed by Esad Arnautalić, and the lyrics were written by Ranko Rihtman. In the same year, the song "Hippie Tom" appeared on one of the "Discos" compilations. The undoubted leader of the group was the guitar player Mahmut Paša Ferović (who previously played in the band Pauci with Davorin Popović) and when he left for his army service, the band ceased to exist. Together with Ferović, the other guitarist and member of the band was Dragan Gagi Danilović. After the breakup of Čičci, Danilović went to Dubrovnik and sang there with the band Dubrovački poklisari (The Dubrovnik Envoys). Upon his return to Sarajevo, Gagi Danilović continued to play music. He played in the band Dobro uštimani starci (The Well-tuned Old Men). In 2013, he recorded a solo album "Želja" (the Desire). The rhythm section consisted of drummer Milić Vukašinović, who previously played in the band Plavi dijamanti (The Blue Diamonds) together with Ed Bogeljić, who would later found Kodeksi, and bass guitarist Zoran Redžić. The fifth member of the band Čičci was Ranko Rihtman. Growing up in a family of prominent classical music creators, Rihtman surprisingly took to the waters of rock 'n' roll. He played keyboards and after Čičci was a member of Indexi on several occasions.

Kodeksi was formed by guitar player Eduard Edo Bogeljić (Eduard Mihael Bogeljić) in the mid-1960s. He was joined by bass guitarist Dušan Čorlija, arriving from the band Lutalice, which ceased to exist after the guitar player Slobodan A. Kovačević joined Indexi. The first line-up drummer of the Kodeksi was Vojo Šimsić, and then Luciano Paganotto joined. Miroslav Maraus also played with them ijn the early days of Kodeksi. Dane Brkić, Seno Sijerčić and Derviš Klokić Dedan also went through the band in various line-ups. Željko Bebek, whom Bogeljić invited to join shortly after the formation of the band, played rhythm guitar and provided vocals. Extremely young at the time, Ismeta Dervoz also became a member of the band. After Čorlija left the band, they started looking for a new bass player and someone remembered that the young band Beštije (The Beasts) had an interesting bass player. Bebek was given the task of listening to him play and if he thought he was good enough, to persuade him to join. The young bass player's name was Goran Bregović.

Kodeksi were known as a cover band and they didn't even try to create something more serious. As a real entertainment band, they were invited to play in the hotel "Splendid" in Dubrovnik during the summer of 1969. However, Ismeta Dervoz was too young for that adventure and left the band and music temporarily to pursue her studies. She would join the band Ambasadori and return to singing in 1972. With her departure from the band, Bebek handled all the vocals.

Kodeksi did not go unnoticed. An Italian impresario invited them to Italy to play as they had performed in Dubrovnik. However, after arriving in Italy, they soon showed that they wanted to play something else - music that was not really close to the audience. There was a rift in the band. Bregović increasingly assumed the role of leader, and when the dissatisfied Edo Bogeljić returned to Sarajevo, Bregović's leading position was formally confirmed. Bregović became the lead guitarist in a band for the first time in his life. An Italian was temporarily hired as the bass player for a very short period of time. To replace him, Bebek invited his friend Zoran Redžić, member of the band Čičak from Sarajevo. As Paganotto also left Kodeksi, Redžić brought his colleague from the band Čičci - Milić Vukašinović - to play drums. In the fall of 1970, dissatisfied with his new status in the band, Bebek left and returned to Sarajevo.

Upon his return to Sarajevo, Bebek reunited with Bogeljić. Joined by the bass player Dražen Tuce, member of the band Pro arte, and drummer Ljubo Pavlović, from the band Romeo i Julija (Romeo and Juliet) they formed the band Novi kodeksi (The New Codices) at the end of 1970.

Other 60s bands on the Bosnia and Herzegovina scene - In addition to the bands Indexi, Čičci and Kodexi, the Sarajevo and Bosnia and Herzegovina music scene of the sixties consisted of names such as Sabahudin Kurt, Miralem Kruškić, Alaga Gagić, Vedo Hamšić, Hamdija Čustović, Dženan Salković. Sokrat Kajević, Boško Orebović, Sabina Varešanović, Terusi (the Students from the Technological and Mining Faculties), Vokinsi and others. Sabahudin Kurt is remembered as the first musician from Bosnia and Herzegovina to represent Yugoslavia at the Eurovision Song Contest. Hamdija Čustović, also known as the Tiger from Miljacka, was the first musician to record Bregović's "Hop Cup", and he also had a big hit with the song "Slao sam joj cvijeće" ("I sent her flowers"). Alaga Gagić from Derventa left many songs, the most famous of which is "Solenzara". Vedo Hamšić was the owner of the first big pop hit about Sarajevo, the song "Četiri mladića idu s Trebevića" ("Four young men go from Trebević"). Dženan Salković from Mostar occasionally wrote and recorded songs, but what little he left behind is extremely valuable. Little is known that he is the author of the song "Prođe ovaj dan" ("This Day is Over") which was made famous by the Zagreb band Drugi način (The Other Way). Terusi was a band from Tuzla known for the many great musicians who have passed through it, and the most famous is certainly Miodrag Bata Kostić, who later played with YU grupa (The YU Group). Vlado Pravdić and Vladimir Savčić Čobi played in Vokins, among others. Čobi, who played drums in Vokins, gained fame as the singer of the band Pro arte.

During the 1960s, not a single relevant record company operated in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The festival "Vaš šlager sezone" ("Your hit of the season") was initiated in 1967. At the first edition of that festival, Kemal Monteno won with the song "Lidija". Shortly before this festival, in March 1967, the First Guitar Festival of Sarajevo bands was held. Indexi won, ahead of Čičci and Kodexi bands.
