Bijelo dugme

Bijelo dugme

Bijelo dugme – Grupa Bijelo dugme izrasla je iz sasatava Jutro koji je početkom sedamdesetih godina prošlog vijeka djelovao u Sarajevu. Kada je u grupi došlo do sukoba između Ismeta Arnautalića i Gorana Bregovića onaj dio sastava koji je ostao sa Bregovićem nije više mogao koristiti ime Jutro pa su uzeli ime Bijelo dugme po pjesmi koju su objavili na singl ploči i koja je već zaživjela u publici. Početna postava uključivala je Gorana Bregovića, Željka Bebeka, Vladu Pravdića, Gorana Ipeta Ivandića i Jadrana Stankovića. Stankovića je na bas gitari ubrzo zamijenio Zoran Redžić.

Tokom 15 godina postojanja postavili su nove standarde na domaćoj estradi. Objavili su devet studijskih, četiri koncertna albuma i brojne kompilacije. Postali su najznačajniji sastav na području Jugoslavije, a kroz grupu su, nakon što je Bebek napustio sastav 1984.godine prošli kao vokalni solisti Mladen Vojičić Tifa i Alen Islamović. Originalni bubnjar grupe Ipe Ivandić, osuđen je za posjedovanje narkotika i proveo je izvjesno vrijeme u zatvoru u Foči. U to vrijeme u grupi ga je zamijenio Điđi Jankelić. Od 1976.godine, sa povremenim prekidima, član sastava bio je i Lazo Ristovski. Karijera Bijelog dugmeta obilježena je i drugim skandalima, zabranama i čestim udarima cenzure. Njihov tadašnji pjevač Alen Islamović je u proljeće 1989.godine, nakon koncerta u Derventi, usred turneje napustio grupu i to je bio kraj Bijelog dugmeta. Okupili su se ponovo 2005.godine radi tri koncerta u Sarajevu, Zagrebu i Beogradu. Od 2014.godine ekipa koju je Bregović okupio povremeno nastupa kao Bijelo dugme, ali brojni fanovi ne prihvataju ovu novu verziju omiljenog sastava.

Ranko Boban

Ranko Boban je bio prisutan i poznat u krugovima stvaraoca pop muzike kao jedan od zanimljivih autora tokom sedamdesetih godina. Imao je i vlastite grupe Vozdra i Metak. Sredinom sedamdesetih piše tekstove za prve hitove grupe COD. Kako je bio jedan od optuženih u čuvenom "narkomanskom" procesu pokojnom Ipetu Ivandiću činilo se da je krajem sedamdesetih njegova karijera prekinuta. Budući da mu je tada ime kompromitovano odlučio je da kao autor sarađuje sa Seidom Memićem Vajtom na njegovom prvom album, ali pod pseudonimom. Na ploči Zlatna ribica pjesme potpisuje kao Ivan Dropulić.

Autor je i mnogih drugih velikih hitova, poput pjesme "Glavo luda" za Zdravka Čolića, "Bobane" za Olivera Mandića, "Puče grom u srcu mom" za Fadila Toskića, a pisao je za Terezu Kesoviju, Nedu Ukraden, Tešku industriju, Almu Ekmečić, Željka Samardžića i mnoge druge. Zlatni period njegove karijere vezan je uz prvu polovinu osamdesetih i saradnju sa Vajtom.

Početkom novog milenija Boban vlasnik najeltinije diskoteke u Čapljini i, uopšte, u Zapadnoj Hercegovini. Kao autor vratio se 2003 na izboru našeg predstavnika za "Pjesmu Evrovizije" kada je njegovu pjesmu "Zaljubljena" izvodila Selma Bajrami.

Vatreni poljubac

Vatreni poljubac – Grupu je osnovao i vodio Milić Vukašinović, nesumnjiva legenda sarajevske rock scene. Rođen je 9.3.1950.godine i to u Beogradu. Već sa 12 godina svirao je bubnjeve u grupi sa bratom, a u trinaestoj je osnivao svoj prvi sastav Plavi dijamanti. Zatim je kao bubnjar prošao kroz grupe Čičak, Kodeksi, Indeksi, Bijelo dugme da bi 1977.godine uzeo gitaru, počeo pjevati i osnovao Vatreni poljubac.U grupu dovodi iskusne muzičare. Tu je basista Šefćet Hodža koji je svirao sa Rezonansom i Divljim jagodama, te bubnjar Perica Stojanović koji je prošao kroz Ambasadore i Indexe. Već prvi singl "Doktor za rock'n'roll" objavljen početkom 1978.godine pun je pogodak, kao i album Oh ,što te volim, joj koji je uslijedio iste godine. Sve do sredine osamdesetih Poljubac reda svake godine nove albume (nekada i po dva u sezoni). Nakon albuma Bez dlake na jeziku grupu napušta Šefćet Hodža, a na njegovo mjesto dolazi Sanin Karić.

Na narednom albumu Živio rock'n'roll obračunava se sa svima za koje vjeruje da su izdali ideju rock'n'rolla. Ne smeta mu, međutim, što sam uspješno sarađuje sa folk muzičarima i autor je nekih od najvećih hitova Hanke Paldum. Tokom rada sa grupom nastaju i neke pjesme koje ne odgovaraju senzibilitetu Vatrenog poljupca pa objavljuje prvi solo album Potraži me 1984.godine. Već naredne godine Poljubac je ponovo aktuelan sa albumom Iz inata na kome se našao veliki hit "Žikino kolo". Naredne godine izlazi jedan od njihovih najboljih albuma 100% rock'n'roll, a na njemu je Mića mjesto pjevača prepustio Mladenu Vojičiću Tifi. Objavljuje do početka rata još dvije solo ploče.

Tokom ratnih sarajevskih godina Mića je svirao sa latino grupom Sonidos barbaros. Po završetku rata srećemo ga kao autora pjesme "Goodbye" sa kojom je Bosnu i Hercegovinu 1997.godine na Pjesmi Evrovizije predstavljala Alma Čardžić. Nakon toga je objavio još nekoliko albuma sa različitim postavama Vatrenog poljupca, a neke i pod vlastitim imenom.

Bijelo dugme grew out of the band Jutro, which was active in Sarajevo in the early 1970s. Due to a conflict in the band between Ismet Arnautalić and Goran Bregović, the part of the band that stayed with Bregović could no longer use the name Jutro, so they took on the new name Bijelo dugme after the single they published had already taken off with the public. The starting line-up included Goran Bregović, Željko Bebek, Vlado Pravdić, Goran Ipe Ivandić and Jadran Stanković. Stanković was soon replaced by Zoran Redžić on bass guitar.

During their 15 years of existence, they set new standards on the domestic stage. They released nine studio albums, four concert albums and numerous compilations. They became the most important band of Yugoslavia, and after Bebek left the band in 1984, Mladen Vojičić Tifa and Alen Islamović passed through the band as singers. The original drummer of the band, Ipe Ivandić, was convicted of drug possession and spent some time in prison in Foča. At that time, he was replaced by Điđi Jankelić. From 1976, with occasional interruptions, Laza Ristovski was also a member of the band. Bijelo Dugme's career was also marked by other scandals, bans and frequent censorship. Their singer at the time, Alen Islamović, left the group in the middle of the tour in the spring of 1989, after a concert in Derventa. This event marked the end of Bijelo Dugme. They gathered again in 2005 for three concerts in Sarajevo, Zagreb and Belgrade. Since 2014, a team assembled by Bregović occasionally performs as Bijelo Dugme, but many fans do not accept this new version of their favourite line-up.

Ranko Boban was present and known in the circles of pop music creators as one of the more interesting authors in the 1970s. He also had his own bands Vozdra (Bye) and Metak (Bullet). In the mid-seventies, he wrote the lyrics for the first hits of the band COD. As he was one of the accused in the famous "drug addiction" trial of the late Ipe Ivandić, it seemed that his career was cut short at the end of the 70s. Since his name was compromised at the time, he decided to collaborate with Seid Memić Vajta as an author on his first album, but under a pseudonym. On the record Zlatna ribica (The Golden Fish) he signed the songs as Ivan Dropulić.

He was the author of many other big hits, such as the song "Glavo luda" ("Crazy Head") sang by Zdravko Čolić, "Bobane" by Oliver Mandić, "Puče grom u srcu mom" ("The Thunder in my Heart") by Fadil Toskić. He wrote for Tereza Kesovija, Neda Ukraden, Teška Industrija (Heavy Industry), Alma Ekmečić, Željko Samardžić and many others. The golden period of his career was in the first half of the eighties and the collaboration with Vajta.

At the beginning of the new millennium Boban was the owner of the hottest disco in Čapljina and, in general, in Western Herzegovina. He returned as an author in 2003 when BiH representative for the "Eurovision Song Contest" Selma Bajrami performed his song "Zaljubjena" ("In Love").

Vatreni poljubac (Fiery Kiss) was founded and fronted by Milić Vukašinović, an undoubtable legend of the Sarajevo rock scene. He was born on March 9, 1950 in Belgrade. Already at the age of 12 he was playing drums with his brother, and at thirteen he founded his first band Plavi dijamanti (Blue Diamonds). After that, as a drummer, he went through bands such as Čičci, Kodexi, Indexi, Bijelo dugme and in 1977 he picked up a guitar, started singing and founded Vatreni poljubac. He brought experienced musicians to the group. There was bass player Šefćet Hodža, who played with the Rezonanca and Divlje Jagode, and drummer Perica Stojanović, who played for Ambasadori and Indexi. The first single, "Doktor za rock'n'roll" ("Doctor for Rock' n 'Roll"), released at the beginning of 1978, was a hit, as was the album Oh, što te volim, joj (Oh, How I Love You) that followed in the same year. Until the mid-80s, Vatreni Poljubac released new albums every year (sometimes two in a season). After the album Bez dlake na jeziku (Without Mincing One's Words), Šefćet Hodža left the group, and Sanin Karić took his place.

On the next album Živio rock'n'roll (Long-live Rock 'n' Roll) he tried to settle accounts with everyone he believed betrayed the idea of rock 'n' roll. However, it didn't bother him that he had himself successfully collaborated with folk musicians and was the author of some of Hanka Paldum's greatest hits. During the work with the band, some songs were created that did not correspond to the sensibility of Vatreni Poljubac, so he released his first solo album Potraži me (Look for Me) in 1984. The following year, Poljubac was relevant again with the album Iz inata (In Spite), which included the big hit "Žikino kolo" ("Žika Folk-Dance"). The following year, one of their best albums, 100% Rock 'n' Roll, was released, and on it Mića left the singing to Mladen Vojičić Tifa. He published two more solo albums before the war.

During the Sarajevo war years, Mića played with the Latin group Sonidos barbaros. After the end of the war, he wrote the song "Goodbye" which Alma Čardžić sang while representing Bosnia and Herzegovina at the Eurovision Song Contest in 1997. After that, he released several more albums with different line-ups of the Vatreni poljubac, and some under his own name.
