Sarajevska rock scena (1980–1992)

Sarajevo Rock Scene

Sarajevska rock scena se tokom osamdesetih mijenjala i razvijala. Pojavljivala su se nova imena, ali su i neka stara nudila drugačiji zvuk nego do tada. Od onih novih, koji su pokušali da uhvate novi zvuk prije "novog primitivizma", svakako su najzanimljiviji Bonton Baya, Kongres i Radio.

Tako se čak i Bijelo dugme posve promijenilo i priključilo novom talasu, sa albumom „Doživjeti stotu" iz 1980. godine. Kasnije su se vratili klasičnom, pa i pastirskom rocku. Mnogi su pratili njihov primjer, ali ne i Vatreni poljubac. Bend je ostao, kako je i sam Mića otpjevao, "dosljedan i glup". Svi njihovi albumi iz osamdesetih su bili urađeni po istom hard rock obrascu, a Milić Vukašinović nikada nije oprostio Bregoviću sve te njegove promjene, pa mu je skoro u cijelosti posvetio album „Živio rock'n'roll" iz 1982. godine. Čvrsti zvuk su preferirale i Divlje jagode, koje su najveću popularnost i postigle baš tokom osamdesetih.

I Rezonansa je, u prvoj polovini osamdesetih, nastavila objavljivati albume, ali ne više onako važne kao prethodne decenije jer se Brano Likić više posvetio svojoj produkciji. Kamen na kamen su na početku decenije imali posljednji veliki hit, pjesmu "Jaranice". Indexi su nastavljali rad, ali ne pretjerano aktivno. Učestvovali su na nekoliko festivala, objavili nekoliko singlova i četverostruki box set „Sve ove godine". Davorin Popović je, u ovom periodu, snimio jedan solo album.

Amila Sulejmanović sa respektabilnom ekipom pokreće vlastiti projekat Amilla. Privremeno se okupila i Teška industrija sredinom osme decenije, ali su u novoj postavi snimili samo jedan album. Najistaknutiji predstavnik rockabilly zvuka su Torpeda, koji su pobijedili na festivalu "Omladina" u Subotici 1989. godine.

Svakako vrijedi pomenuti i bendove koji su bili zanimljive pojave. Grupe kao što su Ozbiljno pitanje, Rock apoteka, Mali princ, Žaoka, Znak sreće, Negra, Bedž, Top, Tačno vrijeme, Pro et kontra, Bioritam, Rusija, Garry Garincha, i Carski rez, pa I dobojska ekipa okupljena oko grupe Rezervni točak. U Mostaru djeluje Rondo, a sa njima pjeva Željko Samardžić. Mostar je imao i heavy metal grupu zvanu Zemljotres. Metalci su imali svoje predstavnike i u Sarajevu, oličene u grupi Tarantula. Čak je i thrash metal bio oličen u grupi Bombarder. Izdvajaju se bendovi koji ne teže komercijalnom uspjehu, poput grupe Major. Medju onima koji preferiraju alternativni zvuk, na prvom mjestu treba pomenuti sastav SCH kao i Scabiu.

Tokom osamdesetih u Sarajevu se dešava izuzetan festival (i to nekoliko godina zaredom) "Nove nade, nove snage" iza kojeg stoji Želimir Altarac Čičak. Nekoliko godina, Čičak organizuje i heavy metal festivale, sa postavama vrijednim svakog respekta.

The Sarajevo rock scene changed and developed during the 1980s. New names appeared, while some well-known bands offered a different sound than before. The most interesting newcomers in the early 1980s who tried to capture the new sound prior to the emergence of the "New Primitives" bands were Bonton Baya, Kongres and Radio.

Even Bijelo Dugme completely changed and joined the new wave sound with the album Doživjeti Stotu in 1980. Later on, they returned to classic and pastoral rock. Many more followed their example. An exception was Vatreni Poljubac. All of their albums from the 1980s were made according to the traditional hard rock sound, and Milić Vukašinović never forgave Bregović for all of his stylistic changes. Vukašinović dedicated the 1982 album Živio rock'n'roll (Long Live Rock 'n' Roll) almost entirely to him. A strong sound was also preferred by Divlje Jagode (Wild Strawberries), which achieved its greatest popularity during the 1980s.

In the first half of the 80s, Rezonansa continued to publish albums, but this period was not as important as previous decades as Brano Likić devoted his time mostly to production. At the beginning of the decade, Kamen na Kamen had their last big hit – the song "Jaranice" (Girlfriends). Indexi continued to work, but were not very active. They participated in several festivals, released several singles and released the four-record box set Sve Ove Godine (All These Years). Davorin Popović recorded one solo album in this period.

Amila Sulejmanović launched her own project Amilla with a reputable team. Teška Industrija also got together for a time in the middle of the 1980s, but recorded only one album with the new line-up. The most notable representative of the rockabilly sound was Torpeda (The Torpedoes) which won the "Festival Omladina" (Youth Festival) in Subotica in 1989.

Several other bands left their mark on the rock scene. These included Ozbiljno Pitanje (Serious Question), Rock Apoteka (Rock Pharmacy), Mali Princ (Little Prince), Žaoka (The Sting), Znak Sreće (Sign of Happiness), Negra, Bedž (Badge), Top, Tačno Vrijeme (Exact Time), Pro et Kontra, Bioritam (The Biorhythm), Rusija (Russia), Garry Garincha, Carski Rez (The Caesarean), and the Doboj team around the band Rezervni Točak (The Spare Wheel). Playing in Mostar was Rondo with lead vocals provided by Željko Samardžić. Mostar also had a heavy metal group called Zemljotres (The Earthquake). Metal music had its representatives in Sarajevo as well – including the band Tarantula (The Tarantula). Even speed metal was represented with the band Bombarder (The Bomber). Certain bands, such as Major, which did not strive for commercial success, stood out. For those preferring an alternative sound, notable examples were SCH and Scabia.

For several years in a row in the 1980s, an exceptional festival "Nove nade, nove snage" ("New Hopes, New Strengths") took place in Sarajevo. Želimir Altarac Čičak was its founder. Čičak also organized annual heavy metal festivals with respectable line-ups.
