Vatreni poljubac

Vatreni poljubac ne samo da je bio dosljedan vlastitom muzičkom opredjeljenju nego nisu mogli oprostiti ni onima koji su, po Milićevom mišljenju, izdali principe rock'n'rolla. Na albumu Živio rock'n'roll iz 1982. godine obračunava se sa svima za koje vjeruje da su takvi, a prije svih sa Goranom Bregovićem. Ne smeta mu, međutim, što sam uspješno sarađuje sa folk muzičarima i autor je nekih od najvećih hitova Hanke Paldum. Tokom rada sa grupom nastaju i neke pjesme koje ne odgovaraju senzibilitetu Vatrenog poljupca pa objavljuje prvi solo album Potraži me 1984. godine. Već naredne godine Poljubac je ponovo aktuelan sa albumom Iz inata na kome je veliki hit "Žikino kolo". Naredne godine izlazi jedan od njihovih najboljih albuma 100% rock'n'roll, a na njemu je Mića mjesto pjevača prepustio Mladenu Vojičiću Tifi.

Nakon što Tifa 1987. godine odlazi iz grupe, Vatreni poljubac prestaje sa radom na preko deset godina. Vatreni poljubac, ali ne i Milić Vukašinović. Objavljuje do početka rata solo ploče Hej, jaro jarane iz 1988. i 1992. Sad ga lomi. Ova druga spada među njegove bolje radove, ali se pojavila neposredno uoči rata u i nije stigla do publike. Po završetku rata on će objaviti reizdanje ovog albuma.

Tokom ratnih sarajevskih godina Mića je svirao sa latino grupom Sonidos barbaros. Po završetku rata srećemo ga kao autora pjesme "Goodbye" sa kojom je Bosnu i Hercegovinu 1997. godine na Pjesmi Evrovizije predstavljala Alma Čardžić. Nakon neuspjeha na Evroviziji sve češći je gost Beograda i tamo obnavlja Vatreni poljubac koji pored njega, tada sačinjavaju bubnjar Dušan Obradović i basista Marko Nikolić. Sredinom 1999. godine izašao je njihov album Sve će jednom proć' samo neće nikad rock'n'roll. Javnost je uzburkala provokativna "Tike tike tačke". Solo album Sexualno nemoralan tip se pojavio početkom 2002. Juna 2003. godine izašao mu je novi album Ima Boga urađen u folk rock maniru.

Učestvovao je u povratničkim koncertima Bijelog dugmeta 2005. godine, a onda je, uz Bregovićev pristanak, objavio dva albuma sa disko remiksima hitova Bijelog dugmeta. Objavio je album Gleda, a ne da sa kojeg je zapažena bila samo naslovna pjesma. Zatim je objavio album sa Erom Ojdanićem Da je život pametniji. Vatrenom poljupcu se vratio 2011. godine na albumu Kad svira rock'n'roll. Album pod vlastitim imenom objavio je 2014.godine. Album grupe Život je k'o fol ako nije rock'n'roll izašao je krajem 2022. godine.

While Vatreni Poljubac were not only dedicated to their own musical direction, they could not forgive those who, in Milić's opinion, betrayed the principles of rock'n'roll. On the album Živio rock'n'roll from 1982, he deals with everyone he believes to have betrayed the principled of rock, above all Goran Bregović. However, it did not bother him that he himself had successfully collaborated with folk musicians, and is the author of some of Hanka Paldum's greatest hits. During his work with the group, some songs that did not correspond to the sensibility of Vatreni Poljubac emerged, so he released his first solo album Potraži me (Find Me) in 1984. Already the following year, Poljubac released the album Iz inata (Out of Spite) containing the big hit "Žikano kolo". The following year, one of their best albums, 100% Rock'n'Roll, was released, and on it Mića made way for Mladen Vojičić Tifa as lead singer.

After Tifa left the group in 1987, Vatreni Poljubac stopped playing for over ten years – but not Milić Vukašinović. Until the beginning of the war, he published the solo records Hej, jaro jarane in 1988, and Sad ga lomi (Now he's Breaking It) in 1992. The latter is among his better works, but it appeared just before the war and failed to reach the audience. After the end of the war, he would re-release this album.

During the Sarajevo war years, Mića played with the Latino ensemble Sonidos barbaros. After the end of the war, he authored the song "Goodbye" with which Alma Čardžić represented Bosnia and Herzegovina at the Eurovision Song Contest in 1997. After the failure at the Eurovision, he became an increasingly frequent guest in Belgrade, and there managed to revive Vatreni Poljubac, which, aside from him, consisted of drummer Dušan Obradović and bassist Marko Nikolić. In the mid-1999, their album Sve će jednom proć, samo neće nikad rock'n'roll (All Things Will Pass, but Never Rock n Roll) was released. The public was stirred up by the provocative "Tike tike tačke". The solo album Sexualno nemoralan tip appeared at the beginning of 2002. In June 2003, his new album Ima Boga (There is a God) was released, played in a folk rock manner.

He participated in Bijelog Dugme comeback concerts in 2005, and then, with Bregović's consent, he released two albums with disco remixes of Bijelo Dugme hits. He released the album Gleda, a ne da (He Looks, but Doesn't Give) from which only the title song garnered any attention. Later he released an album with Era Ojdanić, Da je život pametniji (That Life Would be Smarter). In 2011, he returned to Vatreni poljubac on the album Kad svira rock'n'roll (When Rock 'n' roll is Playing). He released an album under his own name in 2014. The group's album Život je k'o fol ako nije rock'n'roll (Life is Crazy if it's Not Rock 'n' Roll) was released at the end of 2022.

Ante Toni Janković

Ante Toni Janković je karijeru počeo kao pjevač u Divljim jagodama. Bio je autor tekstova za njihove prve velike hitove "Jedina moja" i "Krivo je more". Nakon drugog albuma napušta grupu i već 1984.godine objavio je prvi solo album Za tvoju ljubav.

Ante Toni Janković started his career as a singer in Divlje jagode (Wild Strawberries). He wrote the lyrics for their first big hits "Jedina moja" ("My Only One)" and "Krivo je more" (It's the Sea's Fault"). After their second album, he left the band, releasing his first solo album Za tvoju ljubav (For your love) in 1984.

Goran Kovačević

Goran Kovačević – Nakon pjevanja u grupama Čisti zrak i Teška industrija Goran Kovačević je odlučio da se okuša kao solista. Objavio je dva albuma do 1985.godine.

Goran Kovačević – After singing in the bands Čist zrak (The Clean Air) and Teška industrija (Heavy Industry), Goran Kovačević decided to try a solo career. By 1985, he had released two albums.
